Cancer Care Delivery Workshop at the Wake Forest NCORP Research Base Annual Meeting

Implementing Change with Context-Driven Co-Design (CD2)
October 18, 2023 8:30-11:30am ET

Description: Change is the only constant in health care. NCORP settings, in particular, are often tasked with implementing new interventions, protocols, workflows, or other change efforts. In this workshop, we will summarize a process to support implementation: Context-Driven Co-Design (CD2). CD2, developed by Drs. Haines, Birken, and Morris at Wake Forest University School of Medicine, is a state-of-the-science approach to developing and tailoring strategies to support the implementation of evidence-based interventions and other innovations. CD2, which combines elements of user-centered design and implementation science, includes two components: (1) a detailed assessment of the setting in which an intervention will be implemented (i.e., context assessment) and (2) co-design sessions with intervention end users (e.g., patients and providers) to identify intervention adaptations and implementation strategies to improve intervention-context fit. This workshop will provide an in-depth understanding of the CD2 process through both didactic lecture and group discussion activities and equip participants with CD2 templates (e.g., interview guides, co-design materials) and the opportunity for participants to apply the steps of CD2 to a past, present, or future change effort relevant to their own setting.

A few additional spaces are available for this workshop. Please complete this REDCap form by September 5 to register. Space availability will be confirmed by email.
